

My own boss

I love being my own boss. I get to say what goes.
I can show up any time I want, although I arrive in about 6am to get the day organized. I can go out for lunch everyday, but I usually brown bag it and work straight through. I don't have to answer to anyone, even though the customer is always right. I can vacation any time I want, despite that it has been 4 years.
I get all sorts of perks and write-offs, though the government disallows most of them. I can earn as much money
as I need, sometimes
I do skip my
pay to meet expenses. I can leave
work early,
but quietly
so my staff
doesn't think I'm a slacker.
I control
my own
destiny,
right after
I make
this putt.

This poetry style is called Concrete, where you use the words to create a picture symbolic of the poem.
